

BARMAK MEFTAH
Chief Products Officer
Fortify Software, an HP Company

HEWLETT-PACKARD COMPANY

Barmak Meftah is chief products officer at Fortify Software, an HP Company, where he leads the Global Product Development, Security Research Labs, Product Management and Customer Success organizations.

A technology industry veteran with more than 18 years of experience in enterprise software development, product management and management consulting, Meftah joined Fortify in 2004 as the company's 10th employee. He led the build-out and expansion of a world-class product development, security research, product management and global services organization.

Prior to Fortify, Meftah was vice president of Engineering and Product Management at Synchron, where he managed the strategy, development and release of products in the ground-breaking practice of grid computing. He also spent seven years in various senior management roles at Oracle Corporation within the Server Technologies division. This included group manager for ease of use and manageability product lines and director of Development for the eServices platform. Later he became head of products for the Oracle 9i Database on Windows and .NET platforms.

Earlier in his career, Meftah served as a managing principal consultant at Price Waterhouse LLC in the Management Consulting Services group and as the group head for Wells Fargo Bank's desktop business unit.

Meftah graduated from the University of San Francisco with bachelor's and master's degrees in computer science. He also serves on the technical advisory board for StarCite and is an advisor to numerous venture capital funds.