

David Scott

Senior Vice President and General Manager,
HP Storage
Hewlett Packard Company

---

As senior vice president and general manager, David Scott leads the Storage Division at HP. Scott rejoined HP with the acquisition of 3PAR in September 2010.

As president and chief executive officer of 3PAR, Scott guided the company through the development and introduction of Utility Storage, a new category of storage designed for service providers and cloud computing models. During his tenure, 3PAR grew into a global company serving large and midsize enterprises, government agencies and service providers around the world.

Scott has 27 years of experience in the enterprise storage, software and server market. He was previously the general manager of HP's XP enterprise storage business and has held various marketing, business strategy, sales and systems engineering positions in HP's enterprise server, software and storage businesses both in the United States and the United Kingdom.

Scott is a graduate of Bristol University.
